XII. NOTES

i. Comments	The date of the inscription was calculated on the assumption that the date referred to is the Actian era (i.e. 31 BC). There are some features of the inscription that may raise some doubts about its origin; in particular the beginning of the text with a dating formula, and the titles naopoios and hiereus dia biou, do not feature in any other inscription from Megara. The proposed restorations are unsettling and Jaccottet II is right to feel uncertain about them. In particular, the collocation ἡ σύνοδος τῶν θιασωτῶν Διονύσου, he synodos t[on thiasoton Dio]nysou occurs very rarely, if ever; I would suggest to restore ἡ σύνοδος τῶν μυστῶν Διονύσου, he synodos t[on myston Dio]nysou. It is also difficult to understand what exactly the phrase εἶναι Διονύ[σου θιάσῳ Ἀντίπα]τρον, einai Diony[sou thiasoi Antipa]tron ton naop[oi]on kai dia biou hie]rea means. It would have made more sense to restore εἶναι Διονύ[σου μύστην Ἀντίπα]τρον, einai Diony[sou mysten Antipa]tron, that is the association confers membership to the group together with immunities to Antipatros, temple warden and life long priest of a different cult. Note also the mistaken translation of ναοποιός, naopoios in Jaccottet II no. 7, GRA I no. 60 and AGRW 33 as the one "who built the temple of Dionysus for the association".
ii. Poland concordance	Poland B*3

Note

Jaccottet II no. 7 argues that the group may have had a quasi-official role, because of the immunities granted to the new member. However, there are precedents of exemption from dues among the orgeones of Bendis in Piraeus (IG II² 1283). It is possible that the membership conferred is an honorary one, given the offices/titles that [Antipa]tros held.
