VI. BUILT AND VISUAL SPACE

ii. References to buildings/objects

τὸ ἡρῷον, to heroon (ll. 7, 9): the building erected for the funerary cult of Nonnia Paula, erected by Peplos, a rich inhabitant of the village. Ll. 7-17 contain an inventory of utensils to be found in this sanctuary.

VII. ORGANIZATION

i	. Number	The number of members is not known, but appears to have been fixed. Peplos reserves for himself the right to replace a member who has died with another one (ll. 19-20).
,	v. Relations	All members were related via friendship to Peplos (1. 18).

X. ACTIVITIES

iii. Worship	The association existed to carry out the heroismos of Nonnia Paula, who was present in the heroon with 13 painted portraits and 14 statues (on the meaning of ζώδια, zoidia, cf. Jones 1983: 124)

i. Local interaction	The endowment is under the control of the city, so interaction with local magistrates is to be expected.

XII. NOTES

iii. BibliographyJones, C.P. (1983), 'A Deed of Foundation from the Territory of Ephesos', JRS 73: 116-25.

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association

Probable

Note	It is not quite clear what it means for the association that the endowment was under the control of the city. Jones 1983 has convincingly argued that ll. 1-7 regulate misbehavior of civic magistrates, not of members of the association. This leaves us with hardly any information about the heroistai themselves; we only know that they were chosen by Peplos from among his friends. This is a clear indication of a private association, but by placing the endowment under the protection of the city, Peplos has accorded a public aspect to them as well.
ii. Historical authenticity	Certain
