IV. NAME AND TERMINOLOGY

i. Name in other forms	Ἰσιασταί, Isiastai (IG XII. 165, see G. Pugliese Carratelli, 'Per la storia delle associazioni in Rodi antica', ASAA n.s. 1-2 (1939-40) 182).
ii. Name elements	Theophoric:	From the (originally Egyptian) goddess Isis. Her hieron in the city of Rhodes is attested by Appian, Mithr. 27 (in the context of 88 BC). See D. Morelli, I culti in Rodi . SCO 8 (Pisa, 1959) 58, 155-56.
	Other:	eranistai , which is also a generic term (see below), need not be a standard element in the name of the association.
iii. Descriptive terms	eranistai , koinon
Note	eranistai (and eranos) is a generic description commonly met with Rhodian associations: G. Pugliese Carratelli, 'Per la storia delle associazioni in Rodi antica', ASAA n.s. 1-2 (1939-40) 147-200.

V. SOURCES

i. Source(s)	IG XII.1 157, ll. 3-4. IG XII.1 165 (undated)
Note	IG XII.1 165 (Ἰσιαστῶν, Isiastan , without the elements eranistan and koinon) almost certainly concerns the same association, cf. G. Pugliese Carratelli, op.cit. 182.

VII. ORGANIZATION

iii. Members	Philokrates from Ilion, the person to whom this altar belonged, was almost certainly a member of the association. Likewise Dexagoras, who proposed the honorary degree for Philokrates, was a member of the association.

IX. MEMBERSHIP

iv. Status	Philokrates of Ilion, the person to whom this altar belonged, was a foreigner in possession of epidamia in Rhodes. In the same inscription, Philokrates is honoured by three other associations (see below). Very probably, he was the founder of one of these, the Matioi ktoinetai eranistai Philokrateioi (Ματίοι κτοινέται ἐρανισταὶ Φιλοκράτειοι). See V. Gabrielsen, The Naval Aristocracy of Hellenistic Rhodes, (Aarhus, 1997) 152-53. Attempts to establish the identity of Philokrates (see Hiller von Gaertringen's note to IG XII.1 157) have been challenged: V. Gabrielsen, 'The Status of Rhodioi in Hellenistic Rhodes', C&M 43 (1992) 48 n.9. The proposer of the honorary decree for Philokrates is called Dexagoras, who may well be a Rhodian citizen: for the name, see LGPNI, s.v.

X. ACTIVITIES

iv. Honours/Other activities	The inscription makes reference to the decree, according to which Philokrates was honoured by the Isiastan eranistan koinon. The association had honoured Philokrates from Ilion, who was in possession of epidamia in Rhodes, with a gold wreath. The association is recorded with other private bodies that had honoured Philokrates: the Hermaistai Thesmophoriastai (ὕπὸ Ἑρμαῖστῶν Θεσμοφοριαστῶν), the synthytai Rhodiastai epidamiastai (ὕπὸ συνθυτῶν Ῥωδιαστῶν ἐπιδαμιαστῶν) and the Matioi ktoinetai eranistai Philokrateioi (ὕπὸ Ματίων κτοινετῶν ἐρανιστῶν Φιλοκρατείων). He was also honoured by the citizens of Kamiros (ὕπὸ Καμυρέων).

XI. INTERACTION

i. Local interaction	The association, which was probably based in the city of Rhodos, is seen to honour an individual together with the citizens of Kamiros.
ii. Interaction abroad	Any connection between the association and the city of Ilion, the place of origin of Philokrates, must be indirect and conjectural.

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association	Certain
Note	In addition to the theophoric element in the name of this association, the descriptive term eranistai confirms that it was a private body.
