i.c. Physical format(s)	Statue base

VII. ORGANIZATION

iii. Members	As one can clearly surmise from the nomenclature of the group, membership of the koinon was formed by two units: 1) the hoi en tei nesoi tassomenon Thraikes (military members from Thrace stationed on Cyprus) and 2) the sympoliteuomenoi (the fellow members attached to the Thracian mercenaries: the non-military members, ie. Thracian civilians, presumably).

IX. MEMBERSHIP

ii. Gender	Men
Note	Given the main military character of the koinon , it is likely that members were men only.
iv. Status	The koinon grouped together military men from Thrace, as well as potentially their Thracian fellow civilians, both settled on the island.

X. ACTIVITIES

iv. Honours/Other activities	The koinon honours Ptolemy son of Ptolemy V Epiphanes, with the title of governor of the island.
-------------------------------------	---

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association

Certain

Note

The terminology employed (koinon) and the character of the group, together with parallels of other military koīna on the island, point to a private association. It is less likely that the koinon was the loose community of mercenaries without a more structured and durable associational organisation.
