VII. ORGANIZATION

i. Founder(s)	The phrase 'οὗς συνήγαγε ἡ θεός' (hous synegage he theos) indicates that the goddess was acting as the founder or leader of the koinon (Baslez 1976: 199). The same formula appears in CAPInv. 439 (ID 2225).

XII. NOTES

i. Comments	This is the earliest attestation of a private association in the sanctuary of the Syrian gods. The oikos may have belonged to the koinon, at least in the sense that the koinon together with the priest and priestess took care in repairing it. It seems that the newly repaired oikos was lying by the naos of Sarapis and arrangements had to be done to accommodate the new structure (the naos of Sarapis took up area previously occupied by the oikos). Associations taking their name from the day of the month they met and celebrated are attested in Delos and elsewhere but this is the first attestation of eikadistai on Delos. The Epicureans, celebrating the anniversary of the death of Epicuros on the 20th of the month Gamelion, were known as Eikadistai (Clay 2009: 24-5). Despite the fact that the priest and priestess bear Greek names, Baslez (2013: 231) supports that the foreign element prevails in light of the composition of the name of the association and the way in which the goddess is involved in the organization of the association (founder).
