VIII. PROPERTY AND POSSESSIONS

ii. Realty	Some oikńµ $\alpha \tau \alpha$ , oikemata (l. 5), presumably with some land attached, belonged to the association and were let out.
iii. Income	The associations had income through the letting of some buildings (ll. 4-5), presumably with some land attached. The income from the rents was devolved for the payment of the expenses for the monthly sacrifices held in the association. It is therefore probable that the association could also avail themselves of other sources of income.

ii.	Gender	Men
	Note	Given the military character of the association of the synbasilistai , it seems likely that the members were men only.
iii.	Age	Adults
	Note	On the basis of the military character of the synbasilistai , it is likely that the membership consisted of adults members.
iv.	Status	It seems very likely that the synbasilistai and Dioskouriastai gathered together men of army.

XII. NOTES

i. Comments	The association has the double name synbasilistai kai Dioskouriastai : it is difficult to say whether they adopted it since their origin or the further definition of Dioskouriastai was added later on in the life of the association to express their devotion to the Dioscuri and perhaps to distinguish themselves from other groups of synbasilistai , or whether it was the result of the joining of two associations. At the time of the present inscription they certainly formed one association only: the fact that they had one priest and owned and managed property communally proves this ( pace Pfeiffer 2008: 57). There is no evidence to maintain any connection between this association and the first-century BC Dioskouriakos thiasos (CAPInv, 790).

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association	Certain
Note	The terminology used ( synbasilistai , Dioskouriastai ), the internal organisation with officials, and the ownership of a real estate make it certain that we have here a private association.
