According to Frye et al. 1955: 131, this must have been "a chapel in the early temple"; cf. Milik 1972: 136: "Ce topos devait être une propriété privée adjacente au temple d'Atargatis".

XII. NOTES

i. Comments	The list of synetairoi seems to have contained 15 names; but cf. Milik 1972: 136, who argues that there were originally 12 names after the one of the archetairos, but a thirteenth, written in the right margin, was added later. This serves to bolster Milik's hypothesis that Semitic thiasoi consisted of either 10 or 12 members. However, even if the archetairos was not preceded by another name, I count 15 names (as did Frye et al.). The document is dated to the 20th of Gorpaios. On the same day, but 17 years later, a very similar document was written at Dura; see CAPInv. 676. The two persons who apparently financed the construction are not mentioned in the list of the hypogegrammenoi synetairoi, who were responsible for the actual building.
