VII. ORGANIZATION

iii. Members	See below IX.
---------------------	---------------

VIII. PROPERTY AND POSSESSIONS

i. Treasury/Funds	Funding is notably provided by individual contributions: the inscription lists a series of contributors and the sums promised by them for the benefit of the thiasos .
iii. Income	Several contributions are quite considerable (300 drachmae), others much more modest (as little as 5 dr.). The total amount promised is a substantial sum: 1333 drachmae, not to mention some contributions now missing in the gaps (cf. e.g. col. I, line 13).

IX. MEMBERSHIP

i. Number	14 members are known from the two fragmentary lists in the columns of the inscription.
ii. Gender	Men
Note	All contributors are male. One, however, makes a donation on behalf of his wife (col. II, lines 9-10).
iii. Age	Adults
Note	All contributors appear to be adults, but two of them make a donation on behalf of their children (col. I, lines 9-10; col. II, lines 1-2).
iv. Status	All of the individuals, except perhaps for the first 2 mentioned in the list (col. I, lines 1-2, both named Nearchos, perhaps Knidians), are foreigners to the city of Knidos and identified by their corresponding ethnics. The ethnics of the contributors reveal highly diverse origins: Libya, Arados, Soloi, Myndos, Phrygia, Selge, Kaunos, Thrace, Seleukeia (which?), Samos. It is difficult to distinguish a pattern in these varied provenances (though they might e.g. suggest a group of mercenaries).

X. ACTIVITIES

iii. Worship	The cult (if any) belonging to this thiasos is unknown, but the foreign membership suggests that the cult was perhaps connected to gods situated outside the traditional cultic sphere of Knidos (for example, the Egyptian gods).

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association

Probable

Note

Given the foreign membership and the substantial donations involved, it is highly probable that the thiasos was a private association which was intended to form a lasting group.
