XII. NOTES

i. Comments	A boundary stone from Kos bears witness to another cultic association of Osiriastai (CAP Inv. 1903), which however on the basis of the name should not be identical with the inscription in question. Together with CAP Inv. 1868 all these inscriptions testify to the prosperity of Egyptian cults in late Hellenistic/ early Imperial Kos and the organization of worshippers in cultic associations.

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association

Certain

Note

The name bears witness to an organised cultic association centered around the cult of Osiris.
