i.a. Source type(s)	Papyrological source(s)

i.c. Physical format(s)	papyrus
ii. Source(s) provenance	Although found in Hermopolis (U15), the document was written in Nea Polis (Naples) Italy, Campania (Regio I Latium et Campania), l. 45.

VII. ORGANIZATION

ii. Leadership	high priest of the whole xystos , ll. 50, 77, 97-98: ἀρχιερεύς τοῦ σύμπαντος ξυστοῦ, archiereus tou sympantos xystou . There are four (possibly three if one name is repeated [as Harland has, see bibliography] cf. below "Proper names").  These high priests are also "xustarch-presidents for life", (cf. IG XIV 1104), ll. 50, 78: ξυστάρχης διὰ βίου, xystarches dia biou (But at l. 98, ξυστάρχης xystarches ).
iii. Members	οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς αὐτῆς συνόδου, hoi apo tes autes synodou (l. 3)  συνοδῖτης, synodites (l. 4)
iv. Officials	"Officers" of the association, ll. 60, 68, 71, 85, 90: ἄρχοντες τῆς συνόδου, archontes tes synodou  treasurer, ll. 62, 74, 94-95: ἀργυροταμίας, argurotamias .  chief secretary, ll. 65, 82: ἀρχιγραμματεὺς ξυστοῦ, archigrammateus xystou (is this an official in a gymnasium? s.v. LSJ ξυστός). And an ex-secretary(?), l. 83: γραμματεὺσας τῆς συνόδου, grammateusas tes synodou (cf. Pap.Agon. 1 = CAPInv. 1912 ). At l. 102 here, we have γραμματεῦον grammateuon , which presumes this individual is still serving as a secretary. Is there a prerequisite for the position of archigrammateus ? Did one have to serve as grammateus before becoming eligible?
viii. Obligations	Apparently Herminos alias Moros, paid 100 denarii as an entrance fee (ἐντάγιον entagion ) to become a member of this association (ll. 5-6), κατὰ τὸν νόμον kata ton nomon "according to the law." Is this an imperial law i.e. the one referred to in several Pap. Agon. documents (e.g. Pap. Agon. 1. 15, CAPInv. 1912 )?  Herminos also paid 50 denarii at the games of Asia in Sardis ll. 84-102, esp. 87, 93, 100).

ix. Privileges	Although parts of the document do acknowledge that members received benefits, these benefits themselves - besides membership, and Roman citizenship in some instances - are not given. Il. 1-7 acknowledge Herminos alias Moros, from Hermopolis, as a member, and that he has paid his entrance fee. Il. 16-31 records a second letter from Claudius who, in return for the association's support, bestows Roman citizenship on Diogenes, son of Mikkalos, and his daughters Sandogenes and . . . Il. 32-36 records a letter from Vespasian providing the privileges that the association has seemingly asked for, and noting that he will maintain them. See comments for full details of various sections of the document.

VIII. PROPERTY AND POSSESSIONS

iii. Income	Herminos alias Moros, paid 100 denarii as an entrance fee (ἐντάγιον) at Naples to become a member of this association (Il. 5-6), κατὰ τὸν νόμον kata ton nomon "according to the law." He also paid 50 denarii to act as high priest at the games of Asia in Sardis Il. 84-102, esp. 87, 93, 100). How much of the latter went to the association is not entirely clear.

IX. MEMBERSHIP

i. Number	At least 11, although given the province- and empire-wide nature of this group, significantly larger.
ii. Gender	Men
Note	At least those noted as officials appear to be men.
iii. Age	Adults
Note	At least as far as can be ascertained from the document.
iv. Status	Early members (according to internal evidence, prior to creation of Pap.Agon. 6):  Tiberius Claudius Hermas (Roman citizen)  Tiberius Claudius Kyros (Roman citizen)  Dion, son of Mikkalos, citizen of Antioch  Diogenes, son of Mikkalos, citizen of Antioch (Roman citizen) [are Dion and Diogenes one and the same?]  Daughters of Diogenes (above), Sandogenes and . . . (Roman citizens). The following are prior to the Constitutio Antoniniana so likely not Roman citizens unless otherwise specified (and then only based on the names provided in the text) , but the members are certainly citizens of some significant communities:  Marcus Aurelius Demonstratos Damas, citizen of Sardis, Alexandria, Antinoopolis, Athens, Ephesos, Smyrna, Pergamon, Nikomedeia, Miletos, Sparta and Tralleis (Roman citizen).  Marcus Aurelius Demetrios, citizen of Alexandria and Hermopolis (Roman citizen).  Marcus Aurelius Chrysippos, citizen of . . . , Smyrna, and Alexandria (Roman citizen).  Marcus Aurelius Demetrios (Roman citizen).  Alexander II, also called Athenodoros, citizen of Myra and Ephesos  Prosdektos, citizen of Mytilene.  (?) Proklos, citizen of Ephesos.  Publius Aelius Euktemon (Roman citizen).  Photion, son of Karpion, citizen of Laodikeia and Ephesos  . . . , son of Zosimos, citizen of Philadelphia, Ephesos, and Tralleis  Glykon, son of Glykon (?), citizen of Thyateira.  Quintilius Karpophoros, citizen of Ephesos.

vi. Proper names and physical features

Early members (according to internal evidence, prior to creation of Pap.Agon. 6):

Tiberius Claudius Hermas
Tiberius Claudius Kyros
Dion, son of Mikkalos
Diogenes, son of Mikkalos

Marcus Aurelius Demonstratos Damas
Marcus Aurelius Demetrios
Marcus Aurelius Chrysippos
Marcus Aurelius Demetrios (different to above given relevant citizenships; although context is problematic. Maybe it is the same individual [MG])
Alexander (II), also called Athenodoros
Prosdektos
Proklos
Publius Aelius Euktemon
Photion, son of Karpion
... , son of Zosimos
Glykon, son of Glykon (?)
Quintilius Karpophoros

X. ACTIVITIES

ii. Meetings and events

Clearly the association met at various athletic competitions. Noted within these document alone are meetings/competitions at Naples (ll. 5-6) and at the games of Asia in Sardis (ll. 84-102).

XI. INTERACTION

i. Local interaction

The nature of the document suggests that Hermonis could have used this locally to illustrate his status and make clear his privileges and position in the local arm of the association presumably to the local administration.

ii. Interaction abroad

Clearly this association, like the Dionysiac technitai, had connections to other branches of this group in the Mediterranean. Presumably this local group's interaction abroad would be linked to games and competitions in other parts of the Mediterranean world.

XII. NOTES

i. Comments	The early privileges noted under the Julio-Claudian emperors at the start of the papyrus do suggest a date of foundation in the first half of the first century AD. It is likely that this association is the same as CAPInv. 1941 and perhaps CAPInv. 1957. This text is part of the archive of Theognostos of Hermopolis, that dates to AD 175-238. Il. 1-7 acknowledge Herminos alias Moros, from Hermopolis, as a member of this group, and note his membership payment. Il. 8-15 record a letter from the Emperor Claudius acknowledging an apparent gift - a gold crown - and noting the envoys. Tiberius Claudius Hermas, Tiberius Claudis Kyros, Dion sone of Mikkalos of Antioch. Il. 16-31 records a second letter from Claudius who, in return for the association's support, bestows Roman citizenship on Diogenes, son of Mikkalos, and his daughters Sandogenes and . . . Il. 32-36 records a letter from Vespasian providing the privileges that the association has seemingly asked for, and noting that he will maintain them. Il. 37-83 contain a certificate, during the 49th quadrennial great Augusteian-Italian-Roman games, acknowledging (again) that Herminos has paid his entrance fee and confirms that he is a member of this association. Signatures of several officials from the association follow. Il. 84-102 contain a second certificate, but this time confirming that Herminos has paid the relevant costs for the (to participate in?) the great games of Asia at Sardis. Signatures of officials from the association follow.

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association Note	Certain This association seems to be very similar to the Dionysiac technitai in its organisation. It seems likely then that this group was also a private association. This association is a famous international collective of athletes, and enjoyed imperial patronage, and may be—at least in part—the same as in P. Oxy. 79 5207 (CAPInv. 1941), perhaps made up of several private branches.
