XII. NOTES

i. Comments	There are good reasons to believe that this stele relates to an association also attested on I.Byzantion 38 (CAPInv. 1917), and to an association of worshipers of Dionysos Parabolos. Both documents date according to the first and second eponymous archonships of the emperor Hadrian (see Łajtar pp. 71-2, 74), suggesting that the association honoured the emperor's consecutive terms in office. Łajtar notes that the reliefs on both inscriptions are also similar (p. 74). Finally, the rarity of the Parabolos epithet speaks to the identification of both stelai: the epithet is connected with a spot along the Bosphorus mentioned by Dionysius of Byzantium (Dion. Byz. 50), but is otherwise unattested. The outstanding issue which prohibits a certain identification is the variant usage of thiasitai and Dionysobolitai on the two inscriptions. Cf. Łajtar's comments, I.Byzantion, pp. 71-4 (esp. 74). The epithet Parabolos should be connected with fishing sites along the Bosphorus (cf. Dion. Byz. 50), and the association may have been comprised of fishermen: see Robert 1978: 533-5 and Łajtar, pp. 72-3 ('Dionysos beim Fangplatz').

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association	Certain
Note	I.Byzantion 37 contains references to thiasitai , the members of the association, and to various officials: the inscription attests a gymnasiarchos , a grammateos , a tamias , a hiereus , a prostates , and an euergetes . These constitute officials of the association. It is highly likely but not certain that I.Byzantion 38 relates to the same association.
