XII. NOTES

- |                        |  |
|------------------------|--|
| i. Comments            | The fragmentary state of the stone does not allow us to establish the nature of the document. After the mention of several offices and distinctions in the genitive case (ὑπατικοῦ, ἀρχοντος τὸν α' τόπον, ἀρχιμύστου διὰ βίου, ἀγορανομήσαντος, κοινοβούλου, παιδονομήσαντος, hypatikou, archontos ton 1 topon, archimystou dia biou, agoranomesantos, koinoboulou, paidonomesantos), follows a list of φύλαρχοι, phylarchoi, including a γραμματεὺς, grammateus, and a ἀργυροταμίης, argyrotamias, of phylarchoi (see on this Bekker-Nielsen 2008: 89 and 104). The mention of koinoboulos and the Roman name of a phylarchos (Severus) enables us to date the document to the Roman Period. Fernoux (2004: 460) believes that it was an honorary inscription set up by the phylarchoi of Nikomedeia for a prominent citizen, possibly an imperial legate as Boeckh's (CIG 3773) restitution of l. 2 (ὑπα&lt;τι&gt;κοῦ πρεσ[βευτοῦ], hupa&lt;ti&gt;kou pres[beutou]) would suggest, cf. Madsen 2009: 68. See also Adak and Stauner 2013: 147 note 21 with further bibliography. |

XIII. EVALUATION

- |                        |  |
|------------------------|--|
| i. Private association | Possible   |
| Note                   | The term archimystes dia biou suggests the existence of a hierarchical organization within a rather durable group of initiates but does not necessarily indicate a private association. Fernoux (2004: 460), however, speaks of an association of mystai . |
