In the victors lists at the Mouseia I.Thespiiai 161 and following (see above) the priest sent by the technitai appears as an envoy (ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν τεχνιτῶν, apo de ton techniton) named just after the local priest of the Muses (see Aneziri: 134-5 and 273). The priest is a priest of the Muses. In I.Thespiiai 167 he is from Sikyon, and in I.Thespiiai 169 and 171 from Thebes. Pyrphoros (the expression πυρφοροῦντος, pyrphorountos is used): a pyrphoros is sent by the technitai in I.Thespiiai 169 and 171. Both are from Thebes. In I.Thespiiai 172 the pyrphoros sent by the technitai is from Argos, but a vacat was left for his name. On pyrphoroi: Aneziri: 137.

X. ACTIVITIES

i. Assemblies	Attested by the fact that the technitai pass decrees (I.Thespiiai 156).
ii. Meetings and events	Participation in the organisation of the Thespian Mouseia. On this, see Aneziri: 271-83 and Aneziri 2007: 68-80.
iii. Worship	The priest sent by the technitai is a priest of the Muses, implying that the technitai were worshipping the Muses. On the technitai and the Muses: Le Guen 2001: 85-6.

XI. INTERACTION

i. Local interaction	The technitai organise jointly with the city of Thespiiai the festival of the Mouseia and send priests, sometimes alongside pyrphoroi , to the festival (see Le Guen 2001: 18).
----------------------	---

XII. NOTES

i. Comments	The festival of the Mouseia at Thespiiai underwent a reorganisation in the latter part of the 3rd century BC. The chronology of the events is complex and still debated among scholars (see among others Knoepfler 1996, Schachter 2010-11, Le Guen I; Manieri 2009: 318-25). The technitai agree in their decree I.Thespiiai 156 to make of the festival of the Mouseia a stephanites avon. The decree refers to the fact that the festival was already shared between the city of Thespiiai and the technitai. The latest victors list (I.Thespiiai 172) mentioning envoys from the technitai dates to after 84 BC.
