VII. ORGANIZATION

iv. Officials	ἡγούμενοι ἄνδρες, heiremenoi andres (I.Didyma 486 l. 5) ταμίαι, tamiai (I.Didyma 486 ll. 23-24) Four 'elected men' were proposing the decree; there may have been five in total if the honorand himself was a member of this board; other functions of these officials are not known. The tamiai were treasurers, probably responsible for the χρυσονομία, chrysonomia. In other Milesian associations, the treasurer was called χρυσονόμος, chrysonomos (cf. Robert 1959: 669). Known practice of appointment As the name says, the ἡγούμενοι ἄνδρες, heiremenoi andres, were appointed by election.

VIII. PROPERTY AND POSSESSIONS

ii. Realty	The decree seems to mention several plots of land. One or two were probably donated by the honorand to the association (ll. 13-22), a third was maybe acquired by him for the koinon. It is not clear, for what purpose this land was used. The name of the association suggests that they were used to create a temenos for Aphrodite and Apollon.
iii. Income	The decree mentions "the income of the association" (τὰς τοῦ κοινοῦ προσόδους, tas tou koinou prosodous) that were augmented by the honorand.

X. ACTIVITIES

iii. Worship	The designation of the members as hoi temnizontes and the gods listed in its name demonstrate the association's religious character. A. Rehm (ad I.Didyma 486) saw in the temnizontes a "Verein zur Errichtung einer Kultstätte". It seems, however, likely that the members of this (and the other similar associations) were not (or not only) involved in the establishment of a temenos but rather in its maintenance in the cultic service more generally. Deities worshipped Aphrodite Apollon Didymeus
iv. Honours/Other activities	The associations honor a Milesian, who was most probably a member of the association himself. Rehm (ad I. Didyma 486) characterizes him as the spiritus rector of the association but that is speculation.
