IX. MEMBERSHIP

iv. Status	The honorand, Gnomagoras, son of Dorotheos, Neisyrios, was a high-profile individual, holding high-ranked offices, performing services in the sacred and civic sphere. He was commander of a triemiolia, assumed the office of damiourgos (eponymous magistrate) and held the office of gymnasiarchy. During his gymnasiarchy, he supplied oil for 13 months to all freeborn citizens and his benevolence extended to those settling in Nisyros and to foreign residents. He was honoured by a number of public and private bodies. He showed his adherence to the imperial power, by serving as priest of the imperial cult (IG XII.3 104). He was crowned with multiple golden crowns by the boule and honoured by a number of private associations: - Aphrodiastai Syroi: CAP Inv. 105 - Dios Milichiastai: CAP Inv. 106 - [Dion]ysiastai Ey[rythemid]ioi: CAP Inv. 107 He made himself pleasant to all koineia in Nisyros (CAP Inv. GR-9).

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association	Possible
Note	The name of the group (hermaizontes) suggests emulation of the cult of Hermes. On the basis of the name alone (the only evidence we have at our disposal for this group) the nature of group seems to be elusive; the present participle might suggest an ad hoc group.
