XII. NOTES

i. Comments	Marshall (1907: 218 no. 1421, with pl. XXXIII), published a ring from Dionysopolis bearing the inscription συνόδου μυστικῆς Ταρσέων, synodou mystikes Tarseon, ‘mystic guild of Tarsians’, and suggested that the society would have used the ring for sealing official documents (p. xvii). Annelies Cazemier suggests (per litt.) a connection between this society of Tarsians and the speira of the Asianoī. This is highly probable. M. Aur(elios) Koure(s) ἱερωνόμος, hieronomos, is the same as the priest of the Ἄττεις, Atteis (CAPInv. 1157). From other examples of σπεῖραι, speirai and especially from the term Ἀσιανοί, Asianoī, which seems to be connected exclusively with Dionysiac associations, we can infer that we have to do with Dionysos.
ii. Poland concordance	Poland B 87 (ring from Dionysopolis; cf. XII.i: Comments, above)
iii. Bibliography	Jaccottet, A.-F. (2003), Chosir Dionysos. Les associations dionysiaques ou la face cachée du dionysisme. 2 vols. Zürich. Marshall, F.H. (1907), Catalogue of the Fingerrings, Greek, Etruscan, and Roman, in the Departments of Antiquities, British Museum. London. Slavova, M. (2002), ‘Mystery Clubs in Bulgarian Lands in Antiquity’, OAth 27: 137-149, esp. 140 (about speira), 142 (about koures; but Koures is here a cognomen; cf. Jaccottet 2003: II.109) and 144 (text of the inscription).
