Sarapammon and Heras may have been sons of Syros although the fragmentary nature of the right side of the papyrus makes definitive identification very difficult.

Aurelius Neilos; Pammenes; Ammonios; Ammonios, son of Sarapas; Philosarapis; Sarapammon; Heras; Theodoros, son of Sakaon; Eros; Papontos, son of Demes; Ploutinus; Hippeus; Souchammon; Laskarios, son of Souchammon; Harendotes; Hierax, son of Epimachos; Papontos; [. . .]idios; [. . .], son of Kephalon (?); [. . .], son of Mono() (?); there are traces in l.38, 39 and traces in ll.42-45. Of the latter, nothing can be read, but l.38 reconstructed as [υί]ος Παυσανίου may in fact be <proper name> son of Pausanias (cf. l.41); l.40 [. . .]mes, son of Sarapion; l. 41 [. . . .]chis son of [Neme]sion

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association

Certain

Note

Though synodos would have to be restored, it seems a more than likely reading given the context. The list documents contributions to an association of hieronikai.
