X. ACTIVITIES

iv. Honours/Other activities	The association set up a funerary inscription in memory of L. Cornelius Rufus, perhaps but not certainly a member. This suggests that the association saw to L. Cornelius Rufus' burial but whether this was a general practice applied to all the members or whether the association owned a burial plot cannot be ascertained (on the funerary activities of professional associations see Van Nijf 1997: 38-55).

XII. NOTES

iii. Bibliography	Van Nijf, O. (1997), The Civic World of Professional Associations in the Roman East . Amsterdam.
-------------------	---

XIII. EVALUATION

i. Private association	Certain
Note	The use of the term synodos to describe the group setting up the funerary inscription for L. Cornelius Rufus indicates that it was an organised private association.
