XII. NOTES

i. Comments	The internal organization of the world-wide association of Dionysian artists in the Roman Imperial period still remains largely unclear. It seemed to have been a centrally organized association active in all parts of the (eastern) empire. The organizational and legal relationship between the world-wide structure and the local, polis-based branches eludes us. Cf. Aneziri 2009: 223; 229. Cf. also the letter of the emperor Hadrian to the Dionysiac artists from Alexandria Troas (Petzl and Schwertheim 2006). In ll. 18-19, Hadrian explains that he has written to the Milesians (and the Chians) and has ordered them to "restore to you (sc. the artists) the contests which they omitted" because they had diverted the funds destined for the contests to other purposes.
